Find us on Facebook... iPad is the fifth-generation tablet computer designed by Apple Inc. It was announced on January 9, 2010, and was released on April 3, 2010. It succeeded the iPod touch, the third generation of the iPod line. It is an all-in-one mobile device that is thinner and lighter than its predecessor, and has a front-facing camera, a Retina-quality multi-touch screen, 4G/3G Wi-Fi, GPS receiver and Siri. It has a dual-core A5 system-on-a-chip (SoC) with an NVIDIA GeForce GPU and, like other Apple products of the Apple iOS platform, is designed primarily for iPhone and iPod touch users running iOS 4.3 and above. It also runs the same applications as Apple's iPhone, iPod touch and iPad devices and can use many of their applications. The iPad, released on April 3, 2010, was available on the iPad launch 24 hours later and in the United Kingdom on April 27, 2010. Jobs gave the example of "a new multi-touch interface" for a mobile phone, which he said was "bigger, but different", and announced that the device would be out in the second half of 2007. Jobs did not further elaborate on the form factor, but media speculated that the device was similar to the iPhone 4. The first cases of what would become the iPad began surfacing in October 2007, after Jobs had introduced the iPhone 3GS and iPhone 3G in September and October of that year. In the weeks leading up to the launch of the iPhone 3G and iPhone 3GS, it was speculated in the media that Apple would introduce a new device in the fall, providing a larger display, with a separate web browser, a different user interface, and a new interface for accessing content and content-related apps. Rumors referred to the device as the Apple Tablet, iPhone v2, and iFlop. Also rumored was that the new
